LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear Washington, DC, Community

As President of Howard University, I am pleased to provide you with our "Howard University in the District of Columbia Report," which demonstrates the University’s critical role in the District and our steadfast commitment to its growth.

Since its inception in 1867, the University has called the District of Columbia home. Its original founders, who were abolitionists, believed that African-Americans deserved to have access to the same educational opportunities that they enjoyed. As such, the University played a significant role in educating former slaves, particularly from the District of Columbia.

One of the University’s founding members, Sen. Henry Wilson (R-MA), who later became vice president of the United States, authored legislation that abolished slavery in the District of Columbia. Howard University School of Law graduate Charlotte E. Ray was among the first women admitted to the DC Bar. And in response to the growing need for skilled African-American teachers in the mid to late 1800s, the University partnered with the Institution for the Education of Colored Youth in the District of Columbia.

To this day, the University continues to play a critical role. Howard is a major contributor to the District of Columbia economy; it has more than 9,500 alumni living in DC, provides free legal services for residents, operates a workforce development program, offers healthcare services to DC’s most vulnerable populations, and its students, faculty and staff participate in numerous service projects around the District, giving several thousand volunteer hours annually. Additionally, many of our graduates have become prominent leaders in the District, developing and implementing public policy.

9,500 Howard has more than 9,500 Alumni Living in DC.

As you will see from the report, Howard University touches every facet of the District of Columbia and has been a longtime partner in helping the District expand and improve services and economic opportunities for its residents. I hope you find this information useful and encourage that you take advantage of the educational, healthcare, and community partnership resources available at Howard University. We invite you to visit our campus and our website at www.howard.edu for additional information.

Sincerely,

Wayne A. I. Frederick, M.D., MBA
President

EDUCATION

MIDDLE SCHOOL OF SCIENCE & MATHEMATICS

The Howard University Middle School of Mathematics and Science (MS)² is a public charter school committed to academic excellence, focusing on mathematics and science for grades sixth through eighth. (MS)² was created in partnership with Howard University, designed to deliver programs to help students reach their academic goals and develop the skills needed to succeed beyond the classroom.

Students are prepared for career and entrepreneurship opportunities in science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) disciplines. The STEM curriculum focuses on an interdisciplinary and applied approach. Rather than teach the four disciplines as separate and discrete subjects, the STEM curriculum integrates them into a cohesive learning model based on real-world applications.

Howard is the only post-secondary institution in the District of Columbia that has a middle school offering a comprehensive curriculum for grades sixth through eighth. It was established in 2005 to create a pipeline of students and close the achievement gap. (MS)² students are enrolled from across the District. Forty-three percent of the students are from Wards 7 and 8.

- Advanced courses in mathematics and science.
- Rigorous courses in English and social studies.
- Collaborative programming with Black Girls Code and the Cornell University Science Project.
HOWARD UNIVERSITY DUAL ENROLLMENT PROGRAM

The Howard University Dual Enrollment Program provides high-achieving District of Columbia Public School (DCPS) high school juniors and seniors with an opportunity to take college-level courses, earn college credits and begin their college careers prior to enrolling at an institution of higher learning. Each year, a select group of students who have been accepted into the program will be able to take advantage of these opportunities and enjoy and learn an advanced curriculum relevant to their post-secondary interests. At the end of the program, each student should have benefited from the opportunity to:

- Become acclimated to a college campus through experiencing the college environment and coursework
- Prepare for and experience all aspects of college life, including rigorous college coursework and academic and behavioral expectations
- Reduce the time required to complete their post-secondary degree
- Gain cost-savings opportunities by enabling participating students to save money by taking free courses prior to their matriculation into college

In the program’s inaugural year (2014-2015), nine students from two DCPS high schools (McKinley Technology High School and Benjamin Banneker Academic High School) participated in it. Since then, the program has expanded to include four other high schools (Ballou High School, Duke Ellington School of the Arts, Francis L. Cardozo Education Campus and Paul Laurence Dunbar High School) and an additional 11 students.

Sixteen students participated in the program for the 2017-2018 academic year. Dual Enrollment students can register as part-time/non-matriculating college students taking up to seven credit hours per semester, but no more than two courses during fall and spring semesters, and enroll in a maximum of one course during each summer session. For the fall 2017 semester, 10 students who participated in the program were registered for one course.

SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

The School of Education (SOE) prepares students to become dynamic teachers, researchers, educational leaders and human service professionals committed to improving teaching methods, learning and research in urban and other diverse settings. SOE promotes social justice, educational access and opportunities for Black and underserved populations locally, nationally and globally.

Service in the District

The School of Education partners with the DCPS to help more than 1,400 students receive computer science instruction. Students participating in the program have won Application (App) challenges, such as the DC App Challenge and the Verizon App Challenge.

The School of Education is implementing a comprehensive parenting program (P2S – Parenting to Success) at Ron Brown High School located in Ward 7.

The School of Education provides annual in-service training at DC Superior Court Child Guidance Clinic on working with Muslims in the forensic population. The Child Guidance Clinic provides mental evaluations and reports to probation officers and judges of the Family Court.

The School of Education offers TRIO/Upward Bound programs to DC residents. Upward Bound is a college preparatory program for high school students designed to develop the skills and motivation necessary for success at the collegiate level.
The Howard Graduate School was formally established in 1934 and reorganized in 1976 to its current structure, with divisions in the arts and humanities, biological and life sciences, engineering and physical sciences and social sciences. The Graduate School awarded its first doctorate degree in 1958 in the field of chemistry. Today, the school offers 28 master’s and 27 doctoral programs. The Graduate School is among the nation’s largest producers of African-American students who complete doctorate degrees in science, technology and engineering.

Service in the District:

Paid Family Leave Program: Some of the Graduate School’s faculty members served on an advisory group, offering expert opinions on how to estimate the economic impact of the District’s Universal Paid Leave Act of 2016.

Research on Gentrification in the District: This research project is a central part of the Critical Communication Research Course taught in the School of Communications Culture and Media Studies doctoral program. The project fills a gap in communications literature that lacks research on how those experiencing gentrification learn about it, observe it, feel about it and express their concerns about it. The study provides useful information for various stakeholders, including the mayor’s office and community leaders.

DC Teacher Development: Professors in the College of Engineering and Architecture led an initiative to provide professional development to DC teachers (i.e., public, public-charter, private) relating to curriculum, pedagogy and content for exploring computer science. More than 45 teachers were trained, and more than 1,500 students were impacted.

The Inside-Out Prison Exchange Program: The School of Divinity, in collaboration with the College of Arts and Sciences, is a partner in the program which brings together campus-based students and incarcerated students for a semester course held in a prison facility to share ideas and appreciate different experiences. Since 2015, Howard University has been offering two classes at the DC Jail: Ethics & Politics and Church & Community.
BUSINESS AND WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA SMALL BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT CENTER

Howard University, in partnership with the Small Business Administration, has a Small Business Development Center (DC SBDC) on campus. The DC SBDC has been housed in the School of Business since 1979. It has two distinctions. Nationally, DC SBDC is the only Historically Black College or University (HBCU)-led center and one of only two private institutions, with the University of Pennsylvania as the other. DC SBDC has two full service sub-centers, Anacostia Economic Development Corporation and the Greater Washington Urban League. The Center has strategic partnerships with the District of Columbia Department of Consumer and Regulatory Affairs and the Washington, DC Chamber of Commerce, where it conducts counseling sessions with clients, customers and DC Chamber members. The DC SBDC has a national accreditation with the America’s Small Business Development Centers based on the Malcolm Baldrige Standards of Excellence.

The DC SBDC provides four key services: no-cost small business counseling, low-cost or no-cost workshops, loan package review and industry research. There are numerous workshop topics, including Government Proposals and Bids, Branding, Marketing, Financial Management, Social Media Strategy and Business Operations.

Significant Achievements in 2018:

- Businesses receiving business counseling services: 492
- Created and retained jobs: 65.5
- Business counseling hours: 2,142
- Conducted 31 workshops throughout all Wards: 31
- 520 people attended: 520
- Helped our clientele receive over $12 million in loans: $12M

“The Small Business Report,” a national radio show that highlights successful business owners, focuses on select government agencies, shares procurement opportunities and educates businesses about how to be successful in the marketplace. Carl Brown is executive producer and host of the show, which airs on Sirius XM HUR Voices Channel 141 every week.
CENTER FOR URBAN PROGRESS

The Howard University Center for Urban Progress (CUP) seeks to address urban challenges locally, nationally and globally through University-community partnerships, applied and community-based research, innovative academic programs, technical assistance to urban agencies and community revitalization initiatives.

CUP and Opportunities Industrialization Center of DC (OIC DC) manage a technology training program, formally known as Youth Tech-A+, for District youth, ages 18 to 24, who are out of school. The program develops trainee skillsets and provides them with access to technology jobs. The program trains 25 participants per cycle; usually, there are two cycles per year.

90% Ninety percent of graduates have lived in Wards 7 and 8.

The 28-week program consists of three phases:

ONE
Students learn the basics of computer technology, installation and configuration of PC Operating systems, laptops and related hardware and basic networking.

TWO
Students attend readiness classes and employability training, which the Department of Employment Services provides.

THREE
Students intern at local technology companies to receive practical experience.

SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

The School of Business has been a model for higher education since its founding in 1970. With dynamic academic departments, groundbreaking centers of excellence, esteemed faculty, award-winning programs and more than 12,000 alumni across the globe, the Howard University School of Business continues to be ranked among the top business programs in the nation.

Students and faculty choose the Howard University School of Business because it provides in-depth classroom instruction, real-world experience, expert speakers from a range of backgrounds, access to global industry leaders and a commitment to research and publication.

Business in the District

- Offers free tax services to DC residents, which led to $656,000 in refunds in 2016
- Sponsors a summer camp for high school students who are interested in pursuing careers in accounting, insurance and information systems
TRANSPORTATION RESEARCH

TRANSPORTATION RESEARCH CENTER

Howard University, through the Howard University Transportation Research Center (HUTRC), is the lead University that conducts transportation research for the District of Columbia. Since 1998, HUTRC has conducted research, training and outreach in areas of transportation engineering, policy, management, economics, planning and law. The Center also conducts Safety Engineering analyses for the District Department of Transportation (DDOT), which includes Crash Data Analysis, Safety Improvements and Transportation/Traffic Engineering Data Management.

Service in the District:

1. Supports DDOT’s Traffic Calming Program and Safety Assessments, which includes evaluation of requests for speed humps and multi-way STOP signs
2. Conducted Districtwide speed assessments that led to the installation of speed cameras in the District (2012-2013)
3. Conducts crash analysis for DDOT, MPD and federal agencies
4. Manages two types of internship programs for DDOT: Summer and Semester Internship Programs for DC-based residents
5. Conducts a Summer Transportation Enrichment Program (annually) for Rising ninth and 10th grade students through DC’s Summer Youth Employment Program
Howard University
Monthly Service Projects:

HUH currently hosts, at a minimum, two community service events per month. These events include community walks and runs, health screenings and health education programs offered at many locations around the District.

School Supply/Immunization Drive:
HUH annually sponsors a school supply and immunization drive during the month of August, providing students with much-needed supplies for the new school year, and encouraging families to adhere to school immunization requirements.

Job Training:
The HUH Department of Community Relations hosts adults and students from across the District through programs that expose them to working in a health care environment. HUH serves as a host site for the Mayor Marion Barry Summer Youth program, works with DC government agencies to provide workforce development training and partners with local schools to provide internships and opportunities for students to explore interests in health care and/or earn community service hours.

SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK

The School of Social Work prepares Master’s in Social Work graduates for advanced professional practice at local, national and international levels in solving human problems and becoming leaders in their communities. It prepares doctoral graduates for research, the professoriate and leadership in the global community. The school is dedicated to the pursuit of knowledge through discovery, research, partnerships, innovative process and other scholarly educational endeavors of the faculty, staff, students and alumni. Graduates have a reputation for culturally competent practice and strong advocacy for underserved and marginalized populations. Howard University social workers are trained in therapeutic interventions with individuals, small groups and families as well as macro level practice that supports community empowerment and human service organizational effectiveness.

Howard University Hospital (HUH) has a rich tradition of health care leadership and service, which dates to 1862. Housed in converted U.S. Army barracks, it was initially owned and operated by the federal government and, at that time, was called Freedmen’s Hospital. The hospital provided a refuge where former slaves received the medical care they were denied elsewhere. In the late 1860s, Freedmen’s formed a partnership with the Howard University College of Medicine to train African-American medical professionals. Together, the medical school and the hospital have served as a training ground for many of the nation’s top African-American physicians.

In 1967, the federal government ended its ownership and operating functions of the hospital, allowing Howard University to assume those responsibilities. Federal funds were appropriated in 1975 to open a new facility on Georgia Avenue so that HUH could better meet the health care needs of its patient population. HUH has become one of the most comprehensive health care facilities in the Washington metropolitan area and is designated a Level 1 Trauma Center. It has been the safety net hospital for the District for many years. Its important role in the DC health care community was enhanced by the closure of DC General Hospital. More than 250,000 of the District’s 700,000 residents are Medicaid eligible, and HUH serves many Medicaid and uninsured patients.

The hospital handles more than 33,000 cases for patients who travel across the District from Wards 7 and 8. In the residency training program, many Howard University physicians are practicing at United Medical Center, located in Ward 8.

The School of Social Work successfully advocated for legislation that provides subsidies to grandparents who are raising their grandchildren.

Graduate students provide 46,000 hours of service per semester to DC residents through internships at many District agencies, including the Child & Family Services Agency, DC Public & Charter Schools and the Washington Hospital Center.

A large portion of social service workers in the District have a Howard University MSW degree and many others regularly attend seminars that focus on the newest trends in evidence-based practices, such as trauma-informed practice.

In collaboration with the DC Office on Aging, the Multidisciplinary Gerontology Center has provided professional development for the aging network and allied professionals in the District of Columbia for more than 25 years.

The Multidisciplinary Gerontology Center provides a monthly support group for grandparents raising grandchildren.
HEALTH CARE AND SCIENCES

In the residency training program, many Howard University physicians are practicing at United Medical Center, located in Ward 8.
HOWARD UNIVERSITY AND UNITY HEALTH CARE PARTNERSHIP

In November 2017, Howard University Hospital, Howard University Faculty Practice Plan and Unity Health Care announced a collaborative effort to enhance women’s health care, specifically for residents living in Wards 7 and 8. The partnership focuses on expanding obstetric services to women who historically have access barriers to vital health care services. Once developed, the integrated health care network will increase the number of obstetricians, labor and delivery rooms and neonatal beds.

COLLEGE OF PHARMACY

Pharmacy instruction at Howard University began in the Department of Medicine in 1868. The initial program, held in the evening, offered students a “knowledge of the art and science of pharmacy.” In 1870, the first graduate of the program, James Thomas Wormley, received the Doctor of Pharmacy degree from the Medical Department. During the same year, the pharmaceutical program was differentiated from the medical program and, by 1882, the Medical Department consisted of the College of Medicine, the College of Pharmacy and the College of Dentistry. Since its inception, the College of Pharmacy has been among the leaders in preparing individuals for rewarding careers in pharmacy.

Howard University and Unity Health Care Partnership: Historically, D.C., residents in Ward’s 7 and 8 have lacked full access to a diversity of specialty healthcare providers. Last Fall, on the heels of United Medical Center and Providence Health System closing their obstetric units, HUH and Unity signed an agreement to expand obstetric services to address the gaps in care caused by the closures. Located at the Conway Center, Unity’s new health center will be a two-level, state-of-the-art facility that features 43 exam rooms, which greatly expands access to medical services for local residents who normally travel outside of their community for specialty care. The mixed-use center developed by the non-profit organization, So Others Might Eat (SOME), will include low-cost housing, and a job training program.
COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES

The College of Arts and Sciences (COAS), the largest and most diverse college at Howard University, houses 23 academic departments and programs. COAS provides its students with an education grounded in the quest for intellectual freedom, social justice, artistic expression and pursuit of knowledge. Ultimately, the programs of the College seek to encourage the development of critical and creative thinking in both the scholarly and artistic modes.

Service in the District

Community Work: COAS professors partner with Empower DC, an advocacy group that works to improve the quality of life for low- and moderate-income residents. They have worked in Ivy City and Barry Farms, focusing on environmental justice efforts that include varying levels of citizen science, community development and environmental literacy.

DC Community Science Fest: Since 2008, Howard University and COAS faculty members have sponsored and participated in the DC Community Science Fest, which is a mobile learning environment that offers a unique experience in science and technology for DC students in K-12. Students are exposed to the wonders of chemical, physical and environmental sciences.

DC Environmental Justice Efforts: Faculty members are involved with varying levels of citizen science, community development, environmental literacy, technical consultation and advocacy.
CENTRAL OF EXCELLENCE

Housed under the College of Pharmacy, the Center of Excellence (COE) is funded by a grant that the Department of Health and Human Services, Health Resources and Services Administration, Bureau of Health Workforce awarded the University to help underrepresented minorities enter a variety of health profession fields. The College of Pharmacy uses the grant to initiate programs for high school students to prepare them for college and careers in the health professions fields.

NATIONAL WORKFORCE DIVERSITY PIPELINE (NWDP)

Based on the reputation and successes of the existing Center for Excellence grant, the College of Pharmacy was awarded a grant in 2015, under the National Workforce Diversity Pipeline, funded by the Department of Health and Human Services, Office of Minority Health, to help underrepresented minorities enter a variety of health professions and STEM fields. The College of Pharmacy uses the grant to initiate programs for high school students to prepare them for college and careers in the health professions fields.

Programs in the District:

High School Summer Enrichment Science Academy
This six-week residency science academy is for rising 11th and 12th grade students interested in enrolling in Howard’s pharmacy program. Students also can shadow practitioners in medicine and dentistry.

SAT Preparatory Program
This program is designed to increase the number of competitive applicants applying to Howard University. The Center for Excellence and the University have partnerships with the following schools and community organizations:
- Columbia Heights Education Campus
- Benjamin Banneker Senior High School
- Cardoza Senior High School
- Eastern Senior High School
- Eleanor Roosevelt Senior High School
- Howard University Middle School of Mathematics & Science (MS)2
- HD Cooke Elementary School
- Girls Inc. of the Washington DC Metropolitan Area

NWDP Programs in the District:

Health Occupation and STEM Career Intervention Programs
These programs are designed to create a pipeline in the health care and STEM fields. They are open to rising ninth and 10th grade students. Participants gain a knowledge base and practical experience. Each program has a 16-week duration.

The Junior URM Mentoring Program (JUMP)
A one-week summer enrichment program where students attend workshops and gain hands-on experience in multiple science and medical labs across campus. The program is targeted for rising ninth and 10th grade students. The NWDP has partnerships with the following schools:
- Calvin Coolidge High School
- Columbia Heights Education Campus
- Eastern High School
- Friendship PCS Collegiate Academy
- Friendship PCS Technology Preparatory
- Eleanor Roosevelt High School
- Howard University Middle School of Mathematics & Science (MS)2
LEGAL SERVICES

SCHOOL OF LAW

Howard University School of Law opened its doors in 1869, during a time of dramatic change in the United States. There was a great need to train lawyers who would have a strong commitment to helping African-Americans secure and protect their newly established rights. At that time, the law school did not have classrooms – at least not the way we know them today. The students (there were six in the first class) met at night in the homes and offices of the faculty, all of whom were part-time. Over time, the law school grew, as did the student body and faculty.

The school grew not only in size, but also in its curriculum’s depth and programs’ outreach. In the 20th century, it became the embodiment of legal activism. It emerged as a “clinic” on justice and injustice in America, as well as a clearinghouse for information on the civil rights struggle. The Howard University School of Law and its alumni have fulfilled their mission as agents for social change continuously for more than 146 years.

Howard Law in the District:

- Provides free representation to juvenile defendants through the Clinical Law Center
- Conducts a child welfare clinic to represent parents in termination of parental rights cases
- Assists DC residents with fair housing issues
- Provides student externs for the DC government
- Conducts a fellowship program with the Office of the Attorney General

Thurgood Marshall Academy Partnership:
- Assists students with their homework
- Helps students complete their FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid) applications

COMMUNITY RELATIONS AND INITIATIVES

HOWARD UNIVERSITY COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION

Founded in December 1996, the Howard University Community Association was established to enhance the University’s relations with its surrounding communities. It accomplishes this by: directly responding to individual inquiries and concerns; participating in community and local government sponsored meetings; convening Community Advisory Committee gatherings; cooperating in special joint initiatives; addressing broader neighborhood challenges; and exploring opportunities for improving the overall quality of life for the community-at-large.

Supports the renovation, accessibility and economic viability of the Emergence Community Arts Collective, a signature cultural arts institution in the Georgia Avenue Corridor, using Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) HBCU Community Development Block grants (CDBG), Clark Construction Foundation grants and other public and private funding sources.

Supports the DC-based Lower Georgia Avenue Main Street Program, the Development Corporation of Columbia Heights and the Georgia Avenue Community Development Task Force in bringing economic development and overall revitalization to Georgia Avenue.

FACT

Washington’s only stand-alone radio station

500,000 daily listeners
Howard University Television (WHUT) was founded in 1980, in Washington, becoming the first public station in the United States to be licensed and operated by a Historically Black College or University (HBCU). The station broadcast reaches more than 2.5 million households within a 60-mile radius of the University. The station endeavors to underscore Howard University’s overall mission in its commitment to excellence, leadership and public service. WHUT has been a leader in broadcast communications by providing quality programming for the greater Washington viewing community that is relevant and informative while offering exceptional professional training in television production, engineering and management.

WHUT SERVICE PROJECTS (ANNUAL INITIATIVES)

WHUT partners with community libraries, schools and nonprofits to host a series of events to help young children improve their math skills. The program is geared towards underserved populations.

WHUT is a part of the Let’s Make It Happen initiative, sponsored by the American Graduate. This initiative was founded in response to the high school dropout rate. As a tool to address this issue, Digital Media Arts Club (dMAC) was created. This after-school, multimedia production club is designed to engage at-risk youth by providing the students with digital media production and literacy training along with hands-on training in video production, social media and presentation development. Many dMAC participants have shown that skills gained in the club can positively impact academic achievement, attendance and engagement in the classroom.

ALTERNATIVE SPRING BREAK

For more than 20 years, Howard University’s Alternative Spring Break (ASB) program, a University-wide initiative managed by the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, has been designed to give students unique service learning experiences both domestically and internationally. Each year, hundreds of students choose to participate in service projects that range from youth empowerment to crisis relief. ASB participants volunteer to serve the residents in schools, recreation centers, nonprofits and other service-focused organizations throughout the District and surrounding metropolitan area. Most recently, students led an initiative to combat homelessness and HIV/AIDS.

DAY OF SERVICE

The Howard University Day of Service is held in collaboration with more than 80 sites across the District several times a year, including during Homecoming, Spring Break and at the beginning of the academic year in August. The Day of Service focuses on community-building through seven service-learning initiatives addressing: educational disparities, environmental injustices, health disparities, homelessness and poverty, violence, policy and community relationships and voter registration. This service-learning experience allows Howard students to discover the power of ethical leadership and civic responsibility.
